Editors of the Dispatch: There is a poem by Adelaide Proctor called "A Woman's Question" which is much more beautiful than the one published vesterday. I do not think the latter is by E. B., Browning, as it is not in my edition of her poems. November 29th.

A MYSTERY TO BE SOLVED.

Is Theophilus Youngs Dead or Alive

THE STRANGE CASE WHICH PUZZLES THE NEW YORK SURROGATE-AN ALLEGED THEOPHI-LUS TURNS UP AND IS RECOGNIZED BY HIS BROTHER AND OTHERS, BUT REPUDIATED BY

[New York Times.]

Five years ago Theophilus Youngs, a resident of Boston, and a married man. suddenly disappeared. A dead body was shortly afterward found in the river, which was recognized as his. It was taken to the was recognized as his. It was taken to the Morgue, where it was duly identified and buried. His wife and family went into mourning, and the death of Youngs and the succession of his wife to his property were generally admitted as accomplished facts by those who knew them.

Mrs. Youngs fived at No. 43 Beach street, Boston. In due course of law she was appointed guardian of her three children and administratix of their inheritance on affidavit that her husband, Theophilas Youngs, was dead. Among the property claimed by was dead. Among the property claimed by her as such administratrix was her hus-band's share in the estate of his deceased uncle, Henry Youngs, of Goshen, Orange county, N. Y. By the old man's will the property was divided between Theophilus, his brother Henry, and three residuary legatees. It was doubtful how much they ould get, however, inasmuch as there was a long lawsuit pending as to the construc-

LITIGATION was in progress Henry Youngs, who was was in progress Henry Youngs, who was the executor of his uncle's estate, advanced Theophilus, from time to time, small sums, amounting in all to $2,200, and in 1870 got from Theophilus and his wife a paper, the effect of which, it is claimed, was to relinquish their share in the bequest. The suit was afterward declared in Tayon of the suit was afterward declared in favor of the beirs, and the bequest became very valua-ble. In the proceedings instituted by her after her husband's death, Mis. Theophilus Youngs sued for her and her children's pare of old Henry Youngs's estate, basing her claim on the invalidity of the sale. Henry Younge, the brother and executor, who and bought Theophilus's share of the estate for $2,200, and who is now a retired flour-merchant, residing on President street, Brooklyn, defended the action, set-ling up in answer to Mrs. Youngs's claim that she had no right to bring suit as ad-ministratrix at all, because her husband was not dead, but living.

Then comes the most extraordinary feature of the case. A man claiming to be even going near her, although he was requested to do so to set all doubts at rest.

Mrs. Youngs on her part denounced him as an impostor, and asked to have him arrested.

A few days later the alleged Theophilus appeared in New York, where his brother Henry was contesting his wife's claim be-fore Surrogate Calvin. He declined to be seen or interviewed, and asked not to be questioned about his purposes and recent whereabouts for the present. It was indi-rectly learned from the lawyers of Henry Youngs, however, that the newly-discover-ed husband and father fully concurred in the justice of the alleged sale of his share of the inheritance for $2,200, and had put himself in the hands of Mrs. Youngs's atversaries to disprove her case.

HIS STORY in a general way was that he had left Boston to get rid of his wife, and had gone to the West—to Colorado and Dakota. His wife, on the other hand, says that her hus-band loved her most affectionately, and that, were he really alive, nothing would keep him from coming home to her and his children. The alleged Theophilus further says that during all the years of his disap-pearance he never heard of the litigation or that a reward had been offered for his re-appearance. He was travelling under an assumed name, and no one in the country where he was knew his real one, so that unless he had chanced to read of the matter bimself be could not have learned of it.

The testimony already presented before Commissioner Saunders, in Boston, and Surrogate Calvin, in this city, is still more remarkable. In behalf of the newly-discovered Youngs's identity, Jonathan Willard, a Greene-street picture merchant; Albert Lord, Mrs. Wardwell, of No. 3 Irving street; Mrs. E. G. Mitchell, formerly Maud Lord; Whis. Mr. Scanlan, manager of the New England and Organ Company; and several others, are all said to have either wholly or partially recognized him, and some of them were so positive of his identity that they would not admit the possibility of

A DECEPTION. On the other hand, John Brown, a for-mer servant of Youngs, swore that he saw his body being taken to the Morgue on a cart February 29, 1876. The counsel for Henry Youngs, the brother and executor, who is fighting Mrs. Youngs's claim, went on to Boston and talked with Brown on the who is fighting Mrs. Youngs's claim, went on to Boston and talked with Brown on the subject, and succeeded, he says, in getting from him an admission that he had not positively identified the body, but that it looked like that of his old employer. He also said that the body was carried to the Morgue in the summer of 1877, and not in February, 1876. A picture-canvasser named Lord testified that he had seen Youngs repeatedly in the fall of 1877, and on one occasion had pointed him out to his wife. Mrs. Youngs retorted with the affidavits of three witnesses who had identified the body of Theophilus on February 29, 1876. The defence produced four witnesses who testified that they had seen Youngs pass a certain picture-store in Greene street, Boston, in June, 1878, and that Lord, one of the four, called him up and conversed with him. Another witness testified to having seen him in Providence. Another swore that in December, 1877, Youngs apent the afternoon and evening in his saloon. Some of these dates are after the commencement of Mrs. Youngs's suit to obtain which the present Youngs awears that he never heard anything about. As her husband and the father of her children, he had every motive in coming forward if he was really alive. If her claim was just, it was his interest to come forward and say so; if it was false, he was bound to see that his brother was not defrauded. In any event, his personal appearance and evidence were of the highest importance to both sides, one of which was claiming him to be dead and the other sperting him to be slive. Nevertheless, he continued, he says, to bear his assumed name and to remain in ignorance of all that was going on notil last summer. Then the lawyer of Henry Youngs, the heather who was fighting Mrs. Youngs, the heather who was specifically whether who was the second who the reward formerly offered for the return of the long-lost Theophilus was still outstanding. The reply mentioned the sum of $250. Next came a telegram asking if expenses were to be guaranteed. It was answered in the affirmative. Finally came a third telegram asking whether Theophilus Youngs should start for New York that morning, or whether he should await the arrival of his brother's lawyer in Boston. The latter course was chosen, and in Boston The latter course was chosen, and in Boston the lawyer found the person claiming to be THEOPHILUS. and secured the witnesses already mentioned, and who were prepared to swear, more or less positively, to his identity. Theophitus, however, still declined to see his ophilus, however, still declined to see his wife or children. Mrs. Youngs's request to have him arrested as an impostor was disregarded, as being insufficient in law, Theophilus's friends arguing that, even if he had imposed on his alleged brother, he

he had imposed on his alleged brother, he had not as yet imposed on the wife.

The property which is at stake is differently represented by the two parties at issue. Henry Youngs, the executor, says that it consists of one fifth of two or three teness on Fighth avenue or adjoining houses on Eighth avenue or adjoining streets, worth $80,000 to $100,000. Mrs. Youngs, on the other hand, says that there are eight houses on Eighth avenue, one house on Fifty-fourth street, with two lots and one house, on Forty-third street, besides other property worth from $200,000 to $200. other property worth from $200,000 to $300,ooo. A puotograph of the alleged Theophilus Youngs, compared with one taken of the acknowledged Theophilus in 1874, shows several points of resemblance, although the comparison is marred by the fact that the older picture is a front view and the latter older picture is a front view and the latter a profile. Manager Scanlan, of the New England Organ Company, says that when Youngs was in his employ as a jig-sawyer he (Scanlan) saw a silver plate set near the back of his head, near the top, which plate her neck a gold medal presented to her by President Lincoln for devotion to sick and wounded soldiers during the war. Her first husband was Colonel Miller, said to be an intimate friend of President Lincoln. She served at the tront as a nurse, and is said to bear several bullet wounds in her body. Her father was Cranston Laurie, Chief of the Statistical Bureau of the Post-Office under President Jackson. The alleged Theo-philus says he never heard of this medal while he lived with his wife, and doesn't believe Lincoln gave it to her. There are other extraordinary contradictions in the sardonically and said nothing. Yesterday the testimony was taken of Mrs. Emma Rudderforth, who was an adopted daughter of Mrs. Youngs's father, Mr. Cranston Laurie, of Washington, D. C., lately deceased.

She is, therefore, a foster-sister of Mrs.
Youngs. She testified that she had been reared in the Lauric family, and lived there until she was married; that she had list seen Theophilus prior to his disappearance in Washington in 1874, and did not again meet him until about a month ago, when she saw him and identified him positively in this div and identified him positively in this city; that Mr. and Mrs. Youngs lived together for a time in her adopted father's family, Theophilus Youngs in Boston in August last and declared himself to be the veritable personage who was supposed to have been drowned and buried four years before, and for whose relappearance, if alive, advertisements had been floating about the country for two years. Unlike the Tichborne claimant, however, the alleged Theophilus did not hurry to meet his nearest living relative, but carefully abstained from seeing his wife at all or IDENTIFYING THE MAN in court as Theophilus Youngs. Richard H. Atkinson, of Boston, testified that he was a landlord, and rented premises in Boston to Theophilus Youngs and wife from the fall of 1874 to June, 1875, and that the parties present in court were the same per-sons. He said that while they were his tenants be saw Theophilus sometimes a dozen times a day, and was positive as to the identity of the man in court.

It is understood that a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Youngs is to be produced as a witness in her father's behalf. The girl was eight years of age when her father disap-peared, and since that time has been living apart from her mother, and with relatives. he has not yet seen her father, and a meeting between the two has been arranged for

Brockway's Release. HE SURRENDERS THE PLATES FROM WHICH

THE TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS OF BOGUS GOVERNMENT BONDS WERE PRINTED-REVELATIONS ANTICI-

The action of the Government in releas-rested about a month ago on a charge of baving forged and uttered $204 000 Government bonds and national bank bills of the denomination of $100. He was charged with being implicated with J. B. Doyle, who is under arrest at Chicago; William Smythe, printer; and Jasper Owens. The parties are now all out on bail, with the exception of Doyle, in whose possession the bogus bonds were found. The bonds, which are heautiful specimens of engraving which are beautiful specimens of engraving and photography, are well calculated to de-ceive the best experts. The bankers at Chicago, without exception, it is said, when shown the bogus bonds, were deceived, and declared they would have accepted them as genuine. It is even said that several of them fell into the hands of the Government as being of authentic issue. The Treasury Department caused a microscopic examina-tion of the bogus bonds, and also caused the publication of a circular-letter (which appeared in the Herald at the time), giving the points of difference between the good and the bad bonds.

It is said that Chief Drummond, of the Secret-Service Department, expects that valuable disclosures will shortly be made by Brockway, now that he has been restored to liberty, and that he will reveal the names of an extensive gang of countereiters.

In conversation with an official in the Government service yesterday, however, Brockway is represented as having said that there was no basis upon which to build such expectations, as he "made no promises to give any one away."

The conditions upon which he was re-leased from Raymond-Street jail last week were, it is said, that he should give up the twenty-five plates from which the danger-ous counterfeits were printed. This he did ous counterfeits were printed. This he did before being discharged. He was permitted to go at large upon his own recognizance, though be gave technical bail in the sum of $5,000 for his appearance when wanted for trial. He became his own bondsman. His senior counsel was Mr. W. P. Guild, of Newark, N.-J., who has defended Brockway upon other occasions, and who is familiar with his antecedents.

When first arrested Brockway, who gave his name as Spencer, contended that it was a case of mistaken identity. He was told, however, that Smythe had "given him away," and then he claimed that he had been made the victim of others.

PACE VALUE OF THE COUNTERFEITS.

An official stated yesterday that according to Brockway's assertion there had been $250,000 of the spurious Government bonds printed. But $205,000 of the bonds were found in Doyle's value when arrested, so that there would be $45,000 of the worthless paper transcounted for. He gave no limit, as far as is known, to the number of $100 bills printed. When asked as to whether it was positively known that $250,000 was the actual total amount of the $1,000 FACE VALUE OF THE COUNTERFEITS.

bonds struck off the official alluded to said:
"Well, we have to take Brockway's word for it—whatever that may be worth. The difference between these bonds and the difference between these bonds and the genuine ones is that the bogus bonds are actually better finished than the Government's." The same official stated that Chief Brooks had said there was no evidence against Owens. It is not known what will be done with Smythe. The examination of Owens is set down for December 10th before United States Commissioner Allen.

Brookway, who has resided in Brooklyn

Brockway, who has resided in Brooklyn for several years, has a wife, a son, and a daughter, who live in a fine house in Cleremont avenue. He purchased the bouse a few years ago and deeded it to his wife. About two years ago, owing to alleged jealousy, his wife separated from him, and ney have not lived together since that time. The family do not recognize him, and they did not visit him during the period of his recent incarceration in Raymond-Street jail. He is firm and self-possessed under trying circumstances, and his denials are given with an air of truthfulness well caleqlated to impose upon the unsophisti cated. ASSISTANT DISTRICT-ATTORNEY ANGELL. Assistant District-Attorney Angeli stated to a reporter yesterday that he was not at liberty to say who authorized the discharge of Brockway, but that he was discharged through the advice of the authorities at Washington.
